BRIEFS

Volunteers Needed to Restructure Lost Lunch Ticket Program

The "Lost Lunch Ticket Program" at the elementary school is seeking volunteers to sit on a committee to revitalize the program. The program has been discontinued until it can be reorganized and approved.

Sponsored by the PTO, the "Lost Lunch Ticket Program" loans tickets to elementary school children who do not have a lunch ticket and did not bring a lunch from home. If you are interested in helping to restructure this program, call the elementary school at 2297 and leave your name and phone number. This project is being coordinated by PTO president, Gabe Hilario.

AACC Seeks New Officers

The African American Cultural Committee needs new officers for the following positions: President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer, and Public Relations. The positions need to be filled by April 2002 in order to ensure a complete turnover of duties. Doing things decently and in an orderly fashion is a tradition of the AACC. We hope that all interested persons will support our fine GTMO community by looking within themselves to see if they have what it takes to become an AACC officer.

This past year the AACC has succeeded in educating, enhancing and supporting Guantanamo Bay residents in the preservation and continuation of African American history and culture.

We have found that it takes three key elements to be successful: commitment, dedication and motivation. If you have these traits, we encourage you to not for the office. Don't wait! Election day is coming soon. For more information on the duties of each office or to volunteer for a position, call Cynthia Johnson (Pres.) at 3664, or Yolanda Jones (Vice Pres.) at 7-3280.

Radiothon 2002 to Raise Funds for NMCRS

from Naval Media Center Detachment, Guantanamo Bay

As the Navy and Marine Corps Relief Society (NMCRS) Fund Drive gets underway, the NMCRS Radiothon is quickly approaching. This annual three-day event, sponsored by the NMCRS and the Naval Media Center Broadcasting Detachment here, offers an excellent opportunity for members of the community to donate to the NMCRS and have loads of fun in the process. Last year, Radiothon raised more than $50,000, and our goal is to exceed that amount this year.

The NMCRS is a nonprofit, charitable organization that provides assistance to the members of the Naval Services of the United States, and their eligible family members and survivors, when in need. Interest-free loans or grants to assist with emergency needs, education loans and grants, budget counseling, food lockers, lockeries, thrift shops and visiting nurse services are among the needs NMCRS provides assistance in.

All services are free to those who qualify for assistance.

The Radiothon plays an important role in helping raise the funds needed to keep the organization active. Pledges are taken for music requests. But what makes the Radiothon even more exciting and challenging, is that listeners can actually knock someone's music request off the air by having it bumped with a request funded with a higher pledge. Listeners get the opportunity to battle each other over their favorite songs.

The radio station needs volunteers for Radiothon 2002. If you are interested and would like to help, call at 2351. More information will be available in the coming weeks. Please keep your eyes on The Gazette and your ears on 103.1 "The Blitz" for further information.

We have ceremonial plants available for special events. Volunteers Are Welcome! Returned pots are appreciated!

Introduce Children to Joy of Gardening, Visit GTMO's Nursery

Gardening can be a great "together" activity for parent and child. Whether your garden consists of simple pots or half an acre doesn't matter; the experience of growing something together is the same.

Here are some tips from Disney Online, to ensure a beautiful success from your gardening adventure.

1. Decide together what would be a good plant to start with. A trip to a nursery is a good field trip to introduce children to the many varieties of plants available.

2. Many plants can be started indoors by planting seeds in small plastic pots, peat pots or even eggshells. Children can help you fill pots with potting soil, sprinkle seeds, and water each day as they wait for the seeds to sprout. To ensure success, begin with seeds for basic plants such as tomatoes, marigolds, petunias, radishes, or lettuce and set the starter pots in a southern, sunny window.

3. For impatient gardeners, fill eggshell halves with potting soil, add a few grass seeds and let them grow a tiny onion on the window sill. For even more fun, as the grass begins to grow, draw faces on the egg shells with magic marker and the grass seeds have hair for a cast of characters.

4. Watering plants can be a fun activity for all ages. The next EDN team, involved six students at Aescarpier (AG) "A" school, as well as its five instructors. As part of the pilot, should kicked off in January, the students were given six Navy Webport customized laptops, complete with Internet accounts. This AG pilot class will graduate from the 13-week course in early March, and will head to their first assignments with the laptops and Navy Webport in tow. The pilot will include approximately 300 students and instructors from AG Information Technology (IT), Mess Management Specialist (MS) and Master at Arms (MA) "A" school, chapel school and the Senior Enlisted Academy.

5. Be patient. When gardening with a child, remember that a child's attention span is shorter than an adult's. Take time to enjoy the experience with the child and put off pushing to get all the chores done at back-breaking speed. Don't forget, the most important item you're growing is a strong relationship with your child.

Events Set for Sexual Assault Awareness Month

Amy Radvoly, LMHC
Fleet and Family Support Center

April is nationally recognized as Sexual Assault Awareness Month. The theme advertised by the National Sexual Violence Research Center (NSVRC) is "Make a Difference." We can all make a difference by learning to recognize sexual coercion, following our instincts about an uncomfortable situation and intervening when someone else may be at risk.

Volunteer Advocates are available 24 hours a day to respond to incidents of sexual assault and rape. These advocates provide emotional support and information regarding resources in the community. If you would like further information about sexual assault and rape awareness and intervention, call the SAVI Coordinator at the Fleet and Family Support Center 4141.

During the month of April the Fleet and Family Support Center Sexual Assault Victim Intervention Program (SAVIP) and program volunteers are sponsoring the following base-wide events:

• Friday, April 5, 11am to noon - Volunteers will man an informational table handing out information on sexual assault awareness and prevention.

• Wednesday, April 17, 7 to 9pm - The movie "The Accused," starring Jodie Foster, will be shown at Chapel Hill Fellowship Hall.

• Saturday, April 20, starting at 6:30am - A 5K Run/Walk will be sponsored with MWR.

• Saturday April 27, 6 to 10pm - SAVI volunteer recognition and special night will be held at the Igarna Crossing. The event will consist of entertainment and refreshments.

contained in Navy Webport and how easy it is to navigate. "Wherever you used to have to go to many different sites to find information about your personal and professional life at the Navy, the Webport streamlines this process, by collecting it all in one, user-friendly, site," she said.

Currently, the pilot program, being spearheaded by Navy EDN team, involved six students at Aescarpier (AG) "A" school, as well as its five instructors. As part of the pilot, should kicked off in January, the students were given six Navy Webport customized laptops, complete with Internet accounts. This AG pilot class will graduate from the 13-week course in early March, and will head to their first assignments with the laptops and Navy Webport in tow. The pilot will include approximately 300 students and instructors from AG Information Technology (IT), Mess Management Specialist (MS) and Master at Arms (MA) "A" school, chapel school and the Senior Enlisted Academy.

In the future, Navy Webport may allow users to view their personal Continuum for career development and find information relating to their specific career path. To help Sailors' measure individual performance, the user can then access their performance, development path and identify skill sets, resources and advancement requirements based on the key components of the Sailors' Continuum.

A key element to the Web site is Navy E-Learning, where Sailors can access more than 1,400 Web-based courses and check the progress of their individual learning plans. The laptop is loaded with a Navy E-Learning tutorial and user's guide. AG advancement manual, as well as other useful information. The Webport provides links to important information, like the Navy College Program and the SMART navigation, elective training packages, and leave and earning statements, while quality-of-life information is accessible in the LIFEPLAN section, as well as e-mail for

April is also Child Abuse Prevention Month and Month of the Military Child

Throughout the Department of Defense, April is recognized as the Month of the Military Child & National Child Abuse Prevention Month. These observances afford a wonderful opportunity for the GTMO community to increase awareness about the uniqueness of Military Children and the prevention of child abuse and neglect.

The Fleet and Family Services Center, MWR, CDC, the Youth Center & the GTMO community will conduct the following events:

April 5, at 5:30pm - Join us during the Child Development Center Open House as Commanding Officer, Capt. Robert Bush signs the Proclamation for "April Month of the Military Child & Child Abuse Prevention Month" in the Youth Activities Center. Fun activities and refreshments will follow the proclamation signing. HFSC will have an information booth on site.

April 12, 4 to 6pm - Month of the Military Child & Child Abuse Prevention Month Carnival at the Child Development Center parking lot. Fun activities information booth.

The HFSC will provide the following prevention programs open to the community.

April 17, 2:45pm - Child Abuse Prevention Training for DODDEA Teachers at IIS.

April 17, 6:30 to 8:30pm - Prevention of Child Abuse Workshop- CDC and Youth Center care providers, and the community at large are invited.

April 25, 11:30am to 12:30pm - Providing Emotional Support to Our Children - A luncheon discussion group at the Windjammer hallroom, open to the entire GTMO community.

volunteering and training our Navy's Sailors," said Stankowski.

Through its ease of accessibility, wealth of resources and adaptability to suit the differing needs of each rating, the Navy Webport provides a roadmap for Sailors' professional and personal development.

Finding the Silver Lining

Far from home, family and friends, Coast Guard Reservist PN2 Jim Nanos works with elementary schools to develop a Pen-Pal Program.

By J02 Amy Kirk
GAZETTE Editor

It had been said that every dark cloud had a silver lining. When Coast Guard Reservist PN2 Jim Nanos deployed to New York immediately following the attack on the World Trade Center, he was not sure what that silver lining was going to be.

Working as a police officer in Wadsworth, N.Y. for 18 years, Nanos had spent a large part of his career involved in narcotic undercover investigations. Although he loved being a police officer, he began to feel disheartened and began looking for a silver lining that would make him love his job once again.

That silver lining came in the form of a job change. Still working as a police officer, Nanos took a job with his department as the School Resource Officer.

"I decided that after many years of terrible work hours, Monday through Friday, (7:30 to 1:30), didn't sound all that bad," said Nanos. "Well, I got way more than that, in the way of job benefits and satisfaction."

Assigned to a combination elementary and high school with approximately 600 students, Nanos handles any crimes that may occur on school property, along with any major discipline matters where possible violations of the New Jersey juvenile law may occur. In addition, he teaches the D.A.R.E. program and gives guest lectures on various topics to both students and faculty. Nanos, once again, fell in love with his job as a police officer. Unfortunately, due to circumstances beyond anyone's control, another dark cloud appeared.

"When my unit was deployed to New York a few days after 9/11, I literally left the school with only a few hours' notice," explained Nanos. "While a replacement officer was assigned my duties, many of the students whom I had come to develop friendships with missed me. They soon started sending me cards and letters, and I in turn corresponded back. The kids loved it and they often said that the fact that I was a friend there was in some ways, making them a small part of it, too."

When Nanos returned to his job, he spent many hours in nearly every grade and classroom answering questions and talking about the experience of being at Ground Zero.

His silver lining this time was in helping the students he had come to love learn to understand and accept this tragedy.

Not long after he had returned to work at the school, Nanos learned he would be deploying again, this time to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. This time, however, he had made a plan on how to keep in touch with the students and again make them feel connected to the current events taking place here.

"When I learned that I was going to be deployed here, it seemed only natural to pick up where we had left off," said Nanos. "I set up an e-mail account so the kids from the high school could e-mail me. Several of the grade school class's wanted to do the same, and as accessing and replying to e-mail here is difficult to say the least, I thought it would be a better idea to try to connect one of the local GTMO class's with one back home."

With the help of W.T. Sampson Elementary School, Nanos was able to find out that the sixth grade class of Mrs. Kemp was exactly the same size, student for student, as Mrs. Stein's sixth grade class back home in Wadsworth. Now, a new Pen-Pal Program is in the works.

"We're working out the kinks right now," said Nanos, the excitement evident in his voice. "The kids back home love the idea and are fascinated with being able to write to kids here. The Wadsworth kids have so many questions about what it's like to be raised on a military base and all about the iguanas's here at GTMO."

Nanos went on to say that Mrs. Kemp's class seemed just as excited and had many questions of their own. "The kids here want to know about the housing, the very close and the beaches and boardwalk rides and amusements," said Nanos. "We hope this open on e-mail e-mail helps the kids learn about another small part of the world - Wadsworth, New Jersey."

Proud to serve his country, but far away from home and family, Nanos has once again found a silver lining and the time he is sharing it with others. Starting this Pen-Pal Program keeps him connected with his life back home and allows him to share his experiences with them to take part. It is in increasing students' knowledge about various aspects of military life and perhaps inspiring them to become future military leaders. It is a definite win-win combination and right now when most of the world is looking for silver linings, no matter how small, this program could not have come at a better time.

Flat Stanley Tours Guantanamo Bay

By J02 Amy Kirk
GAZETTE Editor

No, he is not a rock star or a congressional representative. He is Stanley Lambchop, known to students and teachers worldwide as Flat Stanley. And now, thanks to Coast Guard Reserve Petty Officer 2nd Class Pam Moore, Stanley has arrived in Naval Station, Guantanamo Bay.

Who exactly is Flat Stanley? He is the main character of a book by the same name. A nice, average little boy, Stanley Lambchop leads a nice ordinary life until a hailstorm board falls on him, and suddenly Stanley has become as flat as a pancake.

Being flat has its advantages, and Stanley has quite a few exciting adventures, one of which includes being placed in an envelope and mailed to friends in California for a vacation trip. It is in this adventure that his inspired students and teachers across the nation to make paper cutout "Flat Stanley's" of their own and send them out worldwide.

When one of the nation's "civilian life" cowriter, from Mechanicsville, Va., found out she was going to be deploying to GTMO, she asked if her first-grade daughter could give her a Flat Stanley to take on her trip. Thus, began Flat Stanley's adventure here.

As Stanley's sponsor, Moore treats her flat friend as a guest and takes him to various places. After a few weeks Stanley will be mailed back to the originating first-grade class at Persimmon Elementary in Virginia, with a completed description of his trip, as well as some photographs and souvenirs.

"I thought this was a great opportunity for the kids to see what life is like here," said Moore. "Besides, anything you can do to make a child happy is always worthwhile."

Flat Stanley has given Stanley a ride in a Raider boat, allowed him to visit the elementary school, and the Navy Exchange. She also plans to take him on the traditional base tour out to the Northeast Gate, the Air Terminal and even, SCUBA diving.

"I know instantly that this was something I would like to do," explained Moore. "When we do projects like this, we can help kids feel connected to the current events going on. We can show them that there are people here to keep them safe and protect them."

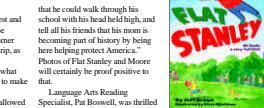

A part of Post Security Unit 105, Moore was also a part of the team sent to patrol and protect the waters off the coast of New York immediately following the September 11 terrorist attacks. Afterward, when she was deployed here for approximately six months, it is hard being away from my son, Jacob. I missed his birthday and that was really hard," said Moore. "But, doing this project makes me feel a little closer to him."

Moore plans to not only send back a report and photos to the elementary school who gave her Flat Stanley, but also to her son's third grade class at Aquaponic Elementary in Virginia.

"It is important for me to show not only my son, but also other children they can feel safe, knowing we are here doing our jobs," said Moore. "When I found out where I was going, I told my son that he could walk through his school with his head held high, and tell all his friends that his mom is becoming part of history by being here helping protect America. Photos of Flat Stanley and Moore will certainly be proud positive to that.

Language Arts Reading Specialist, Pat Howell, was thrilled to learn that Moore wanted to share Flat Stanley with W.T. Sampson Elementary School. She, like Moore, feels it is important to make sure children feel connected with current events. "This is a special time in our history and kids need to feel connected to it," she said. "The military volunteers we have coming in to read to the students helps them feel as if they part of it."

Bowell went on to say that Flat Stanley can now go back to Virginia and not only tell students what it is like to live on a naval base, but also that our American military here will keep them safe and free from harm.

Bowell and Moore helped the students of Mrs. Walsh's class write letters to both Person and Acquisition Elementary Schools, telling students what types of things Flat Stanley would be able to see and do here in Guantanamo Bay.

When Mrs. Walsh asked her class what they think Stanley would have to say about life here, first-grader Victoria said it best: "The world say 'Wow!'"

We wish Stanley bon voyage on his adventures here and on his journey back home. He is welcome to visit anytime!

Coast Guard Reservist PN2 Jim Nanos explains the concept of a Pen-Pal Program to Mrs. Kemp's 6th grade class at W.T. Sampson. The class will communicate with a class in Wadsworth, New Jersey, Nanos' hometown where he serves as a school resource officer for the Wadsworth Police Dept.

Clara Barton, Red Cross part of GTMO History

By YNC Anthony Atwood

MUW 2008, JTF 160

Clara Barton

The Civil War convulsed America in 1861. The casualties in this first modern war were catastrophic. At the first Battle of Bull Run a young civilian nurse came forward to help the wounded. Her name was Clara Barton. Her selfless work saved countless lives.

Barton's humanitarian work came to the attention of President Lincoln. The Red Cross was born, a non-profit civilian organization dedicated to providing the necessities of life: medical care, food and clothing. Clara Barton was its Director.

Later Barton and the Red Cross provided their help to France in the wake of the Clara Barton Franco-Prussian War. And to organized assistance to Armenia when Turkey invaded that region. But her work did not end there.

In the 1900 the island of Cuba was being torn apart. Cuban Freedom Fighters fought to gain independence from Spain. In retaliation the Spanish government took harsh reprisals on the people. Casualties, sickness and starvation made a shambles of the island. Clara Barton and the Red Cross began bringing desperately needed medicine and food. She was in Havana when the United States battleship USS MAINE pulled into port.

She was working at her desk the night USS MAINE exploded. The blast blew in her windows. She rushed to the hospital - 260 Sailors were killed, almost all the rest wounded. Clara Barton went from hospital bed to hospital bed providing care, inspiration and hope. She organized the grim task of burials. The American in Cuba was soon evacuated and Barton returned stateside. She reported to the Army and volunteered her services.

Barton put together a Red Cross hospital ship with medicines and health professionals. She first stepped here in GTMO, and when the American Expeditionary Army landed here in Cuba thirty miles west of GTMO in June, so did Barton. At the age of 76, Barton traveled to Cuba to aid wounded Cubans during the Cuban Insurrection. After the outbreak of the Spanish-American War, however, Clara's attention was turned to both Cuban and American soldiers, whom she personally aided to on the battlefield. The Army fought its way inland against stiff Spanish resistance. At the Battle of San Juan Hill 10 percent of the American Forces were killed or wounded. Malaria and Yellow Fever laid down thousands more. Clara Barton left the coast and walked eight miles under the hot Cuban sun to reach the battlefield. The Angel of the Battlefield was a welcome sight to the troops.

Within a few years both the Army and the Navy instituted Nurse Corps as part of the table of organization. The Red Cross has since grown to be part of the fabric of America, ready to help the civilian and military community in times of disaster or distress. The Red Cross is the military member's personal link to humanitarian assistance.

Red Cross Honors Volunteers

One week ago, Keith Green, ARCT Program Manager at GTMO, hosted the annual Red Cross Volunteer appreciation luncheon. Guests gathered at the Community Center where certificates of appreciation and service awards went out to GTMO citizens and organizations whose efforts promote and support the whole community.

March is Youth Art Month

The month of March has been designated Youth Art Month. This celebration of creativity not only incorporates the visual arts but also the performing arts such as Music, Drama, and Dance. Art education is more than the creation of products; it is an essential part of educating a child. Research has shown that the arts help students develop proficiency in critical thinking and aesthetic judgment. In studying a variety of works, they come to appreciate the efforts of others and value cultural diversity. By providing our students with meaningful artistic experiences in school, we help them develop a means of healthy self-expression that will serve them throughout their lives. We join in W.T. Sampson's whole school effort to promote literacy. Literacy is more than merely reading and writing. In today's world, it must be multidisciplinary. Education in the arts can provide our students with skills needed to make informed decisions and arrive at creative solutions to life situations. Please join us in celebrating our children's creative efforts. There will be a combined art exhibit on April 19, from 4 to 6pm at the Elementary Media Center.
